Report on Alumni Guest Lecture on “How to bridge the gap between Industrial Requirements and Curriculum”

The guest lecture on bridging the gap between industrial requirements and curriculum was conducted on 27th December, 2019 for SY and TY BCom students with the aim of enlightening students about the evolving needs of the industry and how educational institutions can adapt their curriculum to meet those needs effectively. The guest speaker for the session was CA Govind Chandak, esteemed alumni who has had extensive experience working in various industries.

The speaker emphasized the importance of understanding the rapidly changing dynamics of various industries. Factors such as technological advancements, market trends, and globalization significantly influence the skill sets required by employers. Through personal anecdotes and industry insights, the speaker highlighted common skill gaps that exist between what is taught in educational institutions and what is demanded by employers. These include technical skills, soft skills, and industry-specific knowledge.

Establishing effective feedback mechanisms between industry professionals and educational institutions was discussed as a means to ensure ongoing improvement of the curriculum. The guest lecture provided valuable insights into the methods and strategies for bridging the gap between industrial requirements and curriculum. The session concluded with a lively Q&A session, during which students had the opportunity to further explore the topics discussed.
